

Who is Sharper?

Gunamani Nath

Art by
Durlabh Bhattacharjee

This title was developed in an author-illustrator workshop held in Goa from 26 to 29 June 2012.

ISBN 978-81-237-6730-7

First Edition 2013 (Saka 1934)

© Gunamani Nath, 2012

₹ 35.00

Published by the Director, National Book Trust, India

Nehru Bhawan, 5 Institutional Area, Phase-II

Vasant Kunj, New Delhi-110 070

Nehru Bal Pustakalaya

Who is Sharper?

Gunamani Nath

Translation

Deep Saikia

Art by

Durlabh Bhattacharjee

NATIONAL BOOK TRUST, INDIA

Once on an island, in the middle of the river, there lived a fox.
He lived by eating small animals that were thrown ashore by the floodwater of the river.

One day a goat and a few rabbits were washed ashore on the island. The fox was very happy. He began to catch and eat the rabbits one after another.

The goat observed all this and became very scared of the fox. He lost his sleep for the fear of the fox.

One day while chasing a rabbit the fox fell in a deep well.

The goat, while grazing came near the well. To make him hear, the fox cried loudly, "Save me! Save me!"

"Who is it?" the goat looked all around him. Then he came close to the well and peeped into it. He saw the fox sitting there with his head up.

The fox made an earnest request, "Friend save me. Get me out of this well."

The goat replied, "Why should I invite trouble for myself by getting you out of the well?"

The fox said, "I have lost my eye sight. I will not eat you. I promise."

"Ok, if you promise, I will help you," saying this, the goat got a big creeper and threw it into the well. "You hold the creeper and climb up."

Holding the creeper the fox climbed up and came out safely. He then started chasing the goat.

Finding no other way to escape, the goat came up with an idea and said, "I am old now. You will not enjoy my dry meat."

The fox said, "Then bring me a rabbit."

The goat replied, "That's not a big deal, I have just thrown a rabbit into that well."

"Is it true?" the fox asked.

"If it turns out to be a lie then you can eat me," saying this, the goat took the fox near the well.

A detailed illustration of a brown goat with small horns, looking down into a well. The goat's head and front legs are visible as it leans over the edge. The well is filled with a dense layer of colorful, stylized leaves in shades of green, yellow, orange, and blue. The water at the bottom of the well is a bright, shimmering yellow. The background shows the rocky interior of the well.

Looking down the well the fox asked anxiously, "Where is the rabbit?"

The goat replied, "Friend, you said that you cannot see properly,

that is why the rabbit is not visible to you.
You go down with the help of this creeper and you will find the rabbit. Once you finish eating the rabbit, you please let me know.

I will get you out of the well!"

Catching hold of the creeper, the fox got into the well. He searched for the rabbit in vain! He once again pleaded to the goat for help.

The goat merely waved a good bye and disappeared.

Printed at M/s Royal Offset Printers, New Delhi.

National Book Trust, India

₹ 35.00

ISBN 812376730-7

9 788123 767307

12132079